Welcome home Betty! Its great to have you and Uncle Dick back in town. Betty says the Pot Party will be put on hold for a couple of weeks. Watch the North Forty for updates on this.

Dave and Pat Forbes are almost south of the border - Canadian border that is. They've been fishing, sightseeing, wildlife viewing and photographing all over Alaska. Pat wrote that she just downloaded over 1100 pictures from Dave's camera. Aside from a recent overheating problem with the motorhome, it sounds like the trip has been a huge success and a lot of fun. We're looking forward to their return, hearing stories and seeing pictures.

Thanks to Linda Cunningham for her presentation to FEAT concerning the Bird Flu Pandemic. Although the pandemic hasn't been in the news lately, its still a concern and continues to spread, albeit slowly at this time. If you haven't already, you should prepare by putting away several month of food and other supplies. Even if you're not concerned with the pandemic, its a good idea to prepare of any emergency by having a stockpile of food and supplies. Remember, we live in the mountains with limited ingress and egress and many problems can arise.

Kelli Gant continues to do a fantastic job with the North Trinity Lake Online website. If you can't wait for the North Forty to come out in the Journal, log on to this great website to obtain updates on meetings, activities, weather, businesses and even the fires. If you haven't looked, check out www.northtrinitylake.com. Kelli keeps the site updated with current and useful information. You can even find past North Forty articles on the site.

Your Trinity Lake Lions will be holding their annual BBQ on Labor Day weekend. However, they could use some help. If you'd like to donate an hour or two working the food line, call Cheryl Mogensen or Cindy Ahmann. I've done this duty. It's not difficult and its fun talking with the folks as they come through your station. If you can't work the line, be sure to come and enjoy a great meal and local vendors.

Coffee Creek Community Church invites interested persons to join the choir for fellowship and singing on Tuesday afternoons at 5:00 p.m. At 6:00 p.m. a pot luck meal is served with bible study afterward.
